Live events: January 13, 14, 15, and 16, 2022 (Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday)

Presentations, posters, and discussion fora: January 3 through February 12, 2022, continuously.

Place: Online at <https://instituteofandeanstudies.org>

Call for presentations and posters: The Institute of Andean Studies (IAS) calls for proposals for online presentations and posters for its 62nd Annual Meeting. Members, non-members, and students are all welcome to participate and to propose presentations and posters in English or Spanish.

Thematic focus: While our meetings have long emphasized “Andean archaeology and closely related subjects,” the Institute welcomes presentations and posters concerning all time periods and disciplines that illuminate the culture, history, or cultural development of people in the Andes before and after the trans-Atlantic encounter, up to the relatively recent historical past. There is no topical theme this year, but we continue to welcome presentations and posters touching on last year's theme of the Afro-Andean past, to be incorporated into the general program.

Formats and discussion: Presentations are recorded and submitted as videos up to 25 minutes long. Posters are in a JPG format suited to screen viewing. Presenters and first authors of posters participate in one or more live, interactive online discussion sessions; coauthors may participate along with other attendees. First authors are also expected to monitor and participate in the written discussion forum for their contribution; coauthors may do so as well. Technical details will be arranged with authors after acceptance.

Registration: There is no registration fee this year. To register, complete the Meeting Registration Form at <https://instituteofandeanstudies.org> . Click the red “Meeting Details” button. The form opens on September 23.

Registration deadline: For online security, all participants, including presenters and first authors of posters, must register no later than December 15. A list of registrants will be publicly posted shortly after December 15.

To propose a presentation or poster: First register for the Meeting, following the instructions above. Then log into the website at <https://instituteofandeanstudies.org> , if you are not already logged in. Click the red “Meeting Details” button and complete the Submission Form. The form opens on September 23.

The form calls for contact information, a title, an abstract of up to 250 words, a Curriculum Vitae, and other details. Authors of accepted proposals will submit a shorter abstract to post publicly on the Institute’s website.

Submission deadline: The deadline for submissions is October 15. The review committee will notify authors of acceptance or rejection by November 8. A preliminary program and abstracts will be posted around November 20.

Presentation Awards: This year, the funds for the IAS Annual Travel Grant will be divided instead as Presentation Awards in equal amounts to the first author of each accepted presentation (not poster) submitted by a first author who lives and generally is employed in South America and wishes to participate. Simply select that option when submitting a proposal. The deadline is the same as for all others.

Voluntary Support: Those wishing to make voluntary contributions to defray the costs of making the meeting free to all or to support the Presentation Awards are encouraged to use the online “Donate” button on the IAS website, or to send a check to: Institute of Andean Studies, P.O. Box 9307, Berkeley, CA 94709, U.S.A. Registration for in-person meetings has traditionally cost $40 for non-students and $10 for students.

Intellectual property: Author(s) must hold copyright to all materials provided for the Meeting or have obtained all necessary licenses and permissions for any third-party intellectual property. Participants agree to refrain from recording any part of the meeting without the first author’s permission. However, authors must recognize the potential for unsanctioned recording, and shall not hold the IAS responsible should that occur. The first author retains copyright and control of his or her contribution, and the IAS will not distribute it outside the Meeting.

Privacy: Names of registrants will be publicly posted. Email addresses will be available to other registrants by default. Those wishing to exclude their emails from view may select that option when they register.
